Mentor: The Kid & The CEO

Tom Pace with Walter Jenkins

About the Book

The kid (Tony) made another stupid mistake. He felt his life slipping away?until he met the CEO (Malcolm). It is a simple story about an unlikely pair of friends that will have you laughing, crying and hoping this real-life story of hope never ends. Read along and watch as the kid goes from irresponsible to successful and significant.

Discussion Guide

1. Who do I know that I can mentor?

2. Who do I know that can mentor me in one of these five areas: mental, physical, spiritual, financial or relationships

3. With the rise of single mothers, how can we get more men involved in mentoring youth or children?

4. Do I have a dream list?

5. Do I have a financial plan for retirement that is proven to work?

Author Bio

At the age of 26, Tom Pace read at a fourth grade level. Today, however, he has read over 500 books and is a successful CEO, husband, father, athlete and author.
