In the quiet Belgium countryside of the 1990s, 12-year-old best friends Hannah and Sophie are inseparable. That is, until the day Sophie goes missing.

18 years later, Hannah is a successful fashion magazine columnist living in New York. But after years of writing about lip-gloss and stilettos, she's ready to take on a more complex project: a biography of famous authors Agatha Christie, Barbara Follett and Virginia Woolf—three writers who one day disappeared without a trace. Hannah's research into these women's lives raises questions she has long tried to suppress. What happened to Sophie that night? How does a person disappear? Can you ever come back?
